Meiringen Air Force Base nestles among the mountains in the beautiful Hasli Valley in the Bernese Oberland. Its Central Swiss location makes it a key military installation, and the Swiss Air Force flies missions from it all year round with its F/A-18 Hornet fighters.

Given the base’s proximity to the Jungfrau region with its numerous sightseeing flights, as well as to the Axalp and Dammastock military firing zones, along with the generally challenging local topography and the special meteorological conditions in the Hasli Valley, air traffic management at Meiringen can be a complex and demanding affair.
